ALL-SEEING INTELLIGENCE

In the world of security, a bullet-proof system needs the combined intelligence of each individual security function to work effectively. The more you see, the more control you'll have of every possible situation and contingency you might face.

Unfortunately, the vast majority of today's security systems not only require completely separate hardware, software and customer support for each individual function, none of the configurations actually speak to each other—leaving companies with a complex and costly “full solution.”

ENTER MAVIN

The idea behind Mavin is simple: Make it easy for companies to gather all existing individual security functions together into one seamless access management system, and back it up with service and support that is second to none.

We created a platform that gives you an unprecedented, all-seeing view and greater control of your bigger security picture. We made it easy to install, maintain and expand as your security needs grow. And, since we know security levels vary within your staff, we also designed it to allow for personalized access on a case-by-case basis.

Essentially, Mavin puts the intelligence of your entire system at your fingertips. That's security, designed with you in mind.

Scalable. Open. Simple.

Whether you're a small company or a corporate giant, the beauty of Mavin is that our solution is designed not just to fit your security needs—it will grow with you as your needs evolve, maintaining the same simple user interface, regardless of how many systems you integrate. Plus, Mavin supports open field hardware from leading manufacturers, allowing you to leverage—and protect—your existing investment.

Built on an industry-standard Windows-based platform
